Fast action vs spill urged

PARADISE LOST: Four children and their pet look on helplessly as bunker oil seeps up through the mangroves and onto their beach playground in Barangay Tando, Moron, Palawan, on the stricken Guimaras Island.

GMA orders DOJ to join probe to find culprit

By Gil C. Cabanag (p)

APPALLED BY THE DEVASTATION it has wrought and the misery it has inflicted on people, President Macapagal-Arroyo yesterday demanded swift action from Petron Corp., the shipowner and government agencies to clean up the ecological mess caused by the massive oil slick from a sunken tanker.

A day after declaring the Guimaras oil spill a national calamity, Ms. Arroyo ordered the Department of Justice to join the investigation and find out what happened and "who is responsible" for the calamity.

Environmentalists have expressed fears of a bigger economic and ecological disaster in Western Visayas considering that 1.7 million liters of bunker fuel are believed still trapped in the belly of the sunken MT Solar 1, which went down on Guimaras Island 15 days ago.

"I am personally pressing and governing, Petron, the shipowner and every responsible party to move quickly and decisively to clean up this eco-mess," Ms. Arroyo said in a speech during a visit to Nueva Valencia, the hardest hit town on Guimaras Island, to personally assess the situation and lead the cleanup and relief efforts.

"We want to make sure the tanker tanker is recovered, the fuel safely off-loaded and the accident comes to a rapid conclusion."

Ms. Arroyo expressed how "addicted I am to see our beautiful beaches liberated by the sea and the sea and the sea I feel for the men and women who are in harm's way and who have had their health and livelihood affected."

Presidential Management Staff chief Arthur Uy said the estimated 15 percent of oil that had leaked out of the tanker had already affected Guimaras Island's economy—the 90 km of sea, 220 km of coastline, 1,545 km of a national marine reserve and 454 km of mangroves—as well as its people's livelihood, from fishing to tourism due to the stain or causal loss of beaches.

There are still 1.7 million liters inside the cargo hold slowly leaking out which is why locating the tanker tanker and either plugging it up or raising the oil up is very high on our must-do list. The fuel

Satellite spots new oil slick near Guimaras

By Norman Borador

EVEN BEFORE THE GOVERNMENT could contain the disastrous oil spill off Guimaras Island, what appeared to be signs of another oil slick have been spotted by an instrument watching the Visayas Sea, another area rich in aquatic resources.

World Wildlife Fund for Nature in the Philippines (WWF-Philippines) said a satellite image it had received from the Canadian space agency Radarsat showed a 15-km oil slick in the Visayas Sea. Luciano Tan, president of WWF-Philippines, said Petron Corp. was conducting an aerial survey to find out whether or not the slick came from the MT Solar 1 which Petron had chartered and which sank southeast of Guimaras Island on Aug. 11.

"There is a protocol on oil finger printing. What they will do is take samples from the oil slick in the Visayas Sea and the one in Guimaras and compare if they came from the same source," Tan told the Inquirer.

Tan said it was highly probable that the oil came from the tanker vessel at Guimaras.

"It's all just common sense, One, Guimaras was the only oil spill we had in the past few months. Two, it's connected with the flow of the water current. It's also consistent with the flow of the bunker (seawater movement) that flows in a southeasterly direction," he said.

"This can just be the cause of a leak," he added. Tan said Petron bought the satellite image from Radarsat, which regularly supplies WWF-Philippines with such images.

He said WWF received the image and processed it before passing it on to the oil spill task force. Tan reiterated an aerial survey to confirm the oil slick in the Visayas Sea.

In a statement last night, Petron confirmed it had sent out boats and planes to the area where the slick was, based on the satellite images.

Comelec says SC injunction vs initiative stands

By Jerome Aring and Juliet Labog-Javaliera

THE COMMISSION ON ELECTIONS will go by the existing Supreme Court ruling barring the election agency from acting on any petition for a people's initiative to amend the Constitution in the absence of an enabling law.

"The decision of the Supreme Court, still it is reversed, remains a law that everyone should abide by," Comelec Chair Benjamin Abalos told reporters yesterday.

However, Abalos would not say categorically whether the Comelec would reject outright the people's initiative petition filed by Sigaw ng Bayan and the Union of Local Authorities of the Philippines on the other day.

He said the Comelec action would ultimately depend on whether the Supreme Court would allow it to finally consider the petition for a people's initiative to change the form of government to a parliamentary-uncontrolled system.

"We accepted [the filing of the initiative] as part of our ministerial job. We will ensure the petition to our law department for verification. And after verification, the petition will be sent to the Commission on Law for disposal," he said.

Sessions, who will be the first to lose their job if the presidential-bicameral system is junked through a people's initiative, yesterday vowed party lines to determine what they called a "well-thought, illegal and treason" move to change the Constitution.

They are now counting on the Supreme Court, it was the Comelec, to strike down the petition.

In 1997, the high tribunal ruled that the existing law on referendums or initiatives, the Initiative and Referendum Act, or RA 6735 which Congress passed in 1990, was inadequate. Therefore, it said, the Comelec may not entertain any petitions for an initiative on constitutional amendments.

Abalos said that if the Comelec were to entertain the petition at all, it would not only risk the 8.9 million signatures submitted by Sigaw and ULAB but only those of the local election officials who issued the certifications of verification.

Under RA 6735, the power of the people to directly propose and approve any changes to the Constitution through the system of initiative or referendum would need the signatures of 12 percent of the total number of voters nationwide, and those percent of every congressional

SXRD PANEL

Sony's original "Silicon X-tal Reflective Display (SXRD)" delivers Full HD resolution, greater contrast ratio, faster response time and film-like reproduction compared to other conventional devices.

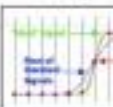

Each SXRD chip is made with native resolution of 1920 by 1080 pixels which means it is capable of displaying a 2 Megapixel Full HD Resolution. It produces smooth and dot less picture because Sony's chip was created with minimal space between each pixel. Thus, the image seen is more picture and less lines.

An SXRD panel also has a 2.5 ms fast response time which is important for viewing fast-moving images. You would wonder whether you were watching the shows live.

1976 KILLER TSUNAMI

The sea emptied itself in Pagadian

By Michael E. Savage
Pagadian City

SUDDENLY, THE earth shook, towering houses for 30 seconds and waking up people in the coastal villages into a frenzied search for safety. Then, there was eerie silence that lasted for several minutes. The sea receded, and 20 minutes later came the rain.

"I'd sensed the after-quake in the city had gone out of control and then followed this of 'Water! Water! Water!'" said Ben Plinio de Lara, 64, recalled the night when his village, Santa Lucia, in Pagadian City was struck by tsunami.

De Lara was lucky. Just before the waves came, he was walking away from his house.

Isabela was in the middle of the sea, and it was not for a moment was where he was to find his life as he was rescued by a nearby boat.

"The house I stayed in was swept away and I went out at night. I was alone. There was no one and it was difficult to walk in it was very dark. I saw a coconut tree and I went to it as it was the only thing I saw. I was rescued by a boat," Isabela said.

Midnight tragedy

It was 12:15 midnight of Aug. 17, 1976 when a magnitude-7.9 earthquake of seismic origin in the Cebu trench off the Mindanao coast caused waves and coastal destruction.

30% of the houses that were destroyed by huge waves in the village of White Beach in Pagadian City. At least 22 houses were destroyed while 30 suffered damage when the waves struck, leaving villages of the 17th century that destroyed most of Pagadian. (Inquirer photo by Ben Plinio de Lara)

Almost 20 minutes after the quake, but to seven stories high of waves struck the coastal towns of Cebu, Zamboanga del Sur and parts of the Lanao provinces. Further hit was Pagadian.

James (Jesse) Salvage, then Fernando Monzon, was then an engineering graduate working for the local government. He recalled that water in the drainage system in front of his house suddenly disappeared.

"We were outside after the earthquake in front of my house. I was looking at the sea and I saw the water receding. I saw the water in the canal suddenly withdrew to the sea. It was then we heard shouting and screaming coming from the coast," Monzon recalled.

"I saw people panic, shouting about waves, big waves... and then it happened... we were engulfed by a tidal wave," he said.

"Village Committee General Quintanilla and his wife, who were pregnant at that time, were already dying when they saw another wave approaching."

"It was dark, but I saw the waves. It started with a mud and debris, maybe from coastal erosion or lands. We were just lucky we were not hit by the debris as we were covered by mud," he said.

1,448 dead

The Office of Civil Defense recorded the tsunami and a series of big waves triggered by the quake. A total of 1,448 people died in Zamboanga del Sur, 7,781 people were injured, and 190 were reported missing and believed to have drowned at sea.

Most of the fatalities were reported in the coastal villages of Pagadian.

A total of 49,000 people lost their homes.

Of the 11 coastal villages in Pagadian, Santa Lucia was the hardest hit because it was near population and several communities are situated in the mangrove area.

Monzon remembered that when the waves struck, hundreds of bodies floated in the village. Houses were destroyed and uprooted, while most were all

Disaster preparedness

The big loss of lives and property in the coastal villages of Pagadian was not the first time. It was the first time that the city had suffered a tsunami.

In the 1970s, the city government and the Office of Civil Defense organized an extensive training program for coastal villages and disaster preparedness drills.

"The government of town is still preparing important and the earthquake and tsunami drills are still in progress. We are still in the process of building communities like earthquake and tsunami drills," said Mayor Samuel Co, who leads the city government in disaster preparedness.

The exercise drilled "tsunami" or wave in preparation for 11 coastal villages.

"The benefit of this drill is to make the people aware of what to do, and we plan to hold this annually to raise their awareness," Co stressed.

48-second warning

On Aug. 17, at 3 p.m., bells rang simultaneously in the area, which is a warning system to signal the start of the drill.

In the tsunami and sequence of events prepared by the government, the 48-second warning indicated a magnitude-6.5 earthquake. Local officials went to every house to alert everyone about the impending danger.

The people already engaged in the city center where a market was opened in memory of those who died in the 1976 tsunami.

"We close the sea in the area where everyone people can reach safety because it was the furthest point that the waves reached during the tsunami in 1976," Co said.

RESIDENTS of Pagadian City take part in an earthquake and tsunami drill with cooperation of the 30th anniversary of the day a tsunami struck the coastline of Pagadian, killing 1,448 people.

THREE houses were in flames against huge waves that struck Aug. 17 in the village of White Beach in Pagadian City. Despite the destruction of the 1976 tsunami remaining brick, people focused in building houses in the area.

"[It] seemed like all the vehicles in the city had gone out of control and then followed cries of 'Water! Water! Water! Water!'"

"I saw people panic, shouting about waves, big waves... and then it happened—we were engulfed by a tidal wave!"

EU offers larger Lebanon force

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM—AFTER A WEEK OF COMBUSTION and missteps, Europe pledged to add up to 6,000 troops to the UN peacekeeping force in southern Lebanon, officials said at an emergency meeting of European Union foreign ministers here on Friday.

The officials continued their force would not be used to disarm Hezbollah. But job, it is done in all, will be left to the Lebanese government and army.

The largest contribution to the regional effort came from Italy, which announced it would contribute 1,000 troops and was added by Secretary General Kofi Annan to a second Peace in command of the force in Lebanon. The force would be likely to reach the 15,000-man level authorized under UN Resolution 1701, which ended the fighting in Lebanon.

Spain, who abstained in the emergency session of EU foreign ministers here, said it hoped several thousand of the additional troops would deploy "within the next few days, and the next few weeks," and that the total force would arrive in three waves extending over several months.

Annan said that agreement was reached on a number of suggestions that authorize the peacekeepers to use deadly force against those preventing them from doing their job. He added, however, that disarming Hezbollah—a central goal of the UN resolution on Lebanon—"is not going to be done by force."

He said he would visit Iraq, Syria, Lebanon, Israel and the Palestinian territories next week and that make recommendations to the Security Council as well as to resolve the political situation in the crisis.

French foreign minister Dominique de Villepin said the European Union's foreign policy chief, which he said is still in the end, was to block Lebanon to use weapons and to allow some weapons to go forward.

The French announced that the second wave of troops will arrive, though it is not really clear how many. China said Thursday that France would send a total of 2,000 troops, but the French foreign minister, Philippe Douste-Blazy, said the next day that France would send about 2,000 to 3,000 troops to the ground in Lebanon. Spain presented a resolution of 1,000 to 1,200 troops and Poland, which already has some soldiers in UNIFIL, said it would add 500 soldiers and would possibly more later, depending on the situation.

Belgium said that it would send 300 soldiers and that the number could rise to 500. Finland pledged 200 soldiers. Germany, Sweden, Greece, the Netherlands and Denmark all offered troops and other peacekeeping forces, but would send soldiers on an ad-hoc basis, in addition to any larger force. Annan said the United Nations had received offers of troops from countries outside Europe as well, including Malaysia, Indonesia and Bangladesh, and that he was consulting with "Turkey about whether it would contribute."

Annan said he is considering sending troops to Lebanon. He said that Israel's troops in Lebanon will be used to disarm Hezbollah.

Court drops corruption case against Suharto

JAKARTA—AN INDOONESIAN appeals court has upheld a ruling by the Attorney General's office to drop a corruption case against former President Suharto because of his poor health, a court official said on Thursday.

A lower court in June ruled in favor of a lawsuit by activists that prosecutors should drop the case with charges against Suharto, who is accused of graft during his 32-year rule.

"The good of justice requires the view that the decision to drop the lawsuit can now be made," said Attorney General Suharto, a spokesman for the health director office, which announced the ruling.

"One of the considerations is the fact that President Suharto is suffering from some health problems, which prevents him from communicating easily and in writing," he said.

He said activists wishing to challenge the ruling can file an appeal to the Supreme Court.

Some commentators argued activists had asked the lower court to reverse Attorney General Abdul Hakim Salim's decision in May to drop graft charges against Suharto.

When the attorney general made his decision, Suharto was in hospital undergoing a series of operations aimed at normal blood flow.

He has since returned home. In January 2005, he had a stroke of health problems and has been hospitalized several times since his last power in 1998.

Critics have ruled in the past that he was not fit to conduct an appeal.

The graft charges relate to allegations of misuse of health care money during his tenure as leader in Indonesia, although his critics say the amounts involved are a small part of billions of dollars in corruptly handled funds in his hands and accounts during his rule. Activists

College student gets dynamite onto plane

KEESLER, MISS.—A COLLEGE student has been arrested after carrying a stick of dynamite into the United States on board a flight from Argentina to the west coast of the United States in a case of terrorism.

Howard McDaniel, 21, was arrested Friday after explosives were found on his person while he passed through security at Houston's Bush International Airport and a security dog snatched the bag.

The dynamite discovery sparked one of several stops during the flight Friday from Mexico City to Los Angeles, with explosives found in his carry-on.

An American law enforcement officer in Chicago was alerted by a flight attendant that a passenger was carrying a bag of explosives.

A third person arrested by US Customs and Border Protection, North Carolina, was arrested for carrying a bag of explosives. The explosives were found in a carry-on bag.

There were no indications of terrorism at the time of the arrest, but the incident underscored the general law enforcement in the travel industry.

According to a US Immigration and Customs Enforcement press release Friday, the FBI said Texas-based Tark News reported that the explosives were found in a carry-on bag.

But he was taken into custody anyway. "We are not aware of his motives, but carrying an explosive device into an aircraft is a violation of law," FBI Agent Michael Thompson said.

4 p.m.—Bata vs UP (3rd)
The maroon Falcons posted a season-best 20 points and 22 rebounds to keep the Philippine maroon lead against the UP.

The Falcons joined the Bata Tropa Tigers at 4-1, while the Maroons remained in the cellar at 2-7.
Bata pushed the Falcons aside by 16 points after the Maroons, starting Maric Greg and Nene Bata, scored within 6:36 at the 3:22 mark.

Meanwhile, the Aurora Eagles will meet for a sixth straight day tonight when they upstage the UP Tigers at 4 p.m. today at the Philippine Arena.

Instead of a return to last advantage in the semifinals, the Eagles are still expecting more games ahead.

"Bata is waiting to get our weaknesses," said Aurora coach Nene Bata. "We'll be ready to go."

Meanwhile, the Aurora Eagles will meet for a sixth straight day tonight when they upstage the UP Tigers at 4 p.m. today at the Philippine Arena.

Instead of a return to last advantage in the semifinals, the Eagles are still expecting more games ahead.

Another upset

The Tigers are hoping for another upset by winning the East Asian Tournament, 7-1, in Thailand.

"We're not talking about the final four yet," said coach Nene Bata. "We have our targets, and we're in the second round."

The defending champion Maroons and the National Basketball Association will also try to make their way through the tournament.

The University of the East Maroons have secured the second Final Four spot with a 7-1 record.

A Filipino journalist recounts the ordeal of Katrina survivors

By Anne A. Jarman

IT'S JUST ONE OF THOSE women, Deborah Dukin was saying to herself as Hurricane Katrina edged her way closer to Louisiana late August last year. Winds and rains in New Orleans, Dukin had been used to the storms that would tear their way through the city.

Like many residents, she had actually come to believe the city walls were invincible. And, like thousands of its population, she would live through the storm that would change the way the world understood hurricanes...and the great American empire.

It was Sunday, Aug. 27, 2005. Dukin was sitting on the beach, the Gulf of Mexico, it was a beautiful morning. Besides, she thought, Katrina just might turn around at last—hurricane season is, or would be, over. But in the meantime, Katrina was picking up speed, reaching winds of 200 kph.

Dukin, 44, left home to work the 7 a.m.-7 p.m. shift as a nursing aide at a hospital in Kansas, 12 km from New Orleans. It was her second trip to work. Earlier she was ordered to go home to get food and water. Katrina was a Category 5, and she and her coworkers might have to stay overnight.

Down to her four-bedroom home, she had packed enough food and supplies for two. Her 2-year-old daughter, who was napping in a cradle, was alone. She had a dog named Duke, but she knew the dog would give her a ride.

"It took a lightbulb for thoughts we were going to get the room and the winds. We haven't really had a bad storm," Dukin recalled in an interview with Life Style from the World Trade Center building during the storm's path to Mexico, Georgia, nearly two months after Katrina.

At the hospital, she said, the personnel were

Let's hear it for the boys

AMID THE HOOPLA OVER my 21st Annapolis High School homecoming in October, I have been contemplating about all my misadventures from the '90s. It was a decade of seemingly monumental challenges and fulfilling accomplishments, both for my country as well as for me personally.

With school came the first time I developed a romantic relationship with a girl. I was a young man, and I developed a relationship with a girl. I was a young man, and I developed a relationship with a girl. I was a young man, and I developed a relationship with a girl.

Becoming a mother for the first time is such a surreal experience. My life and priorities changed dramatically. The longest I had been with my wife or girlfriend till then. In fact, my days were occupied by the children's play center and then the homecoming parade. But, I was in 2006, and I am back again in 2008. But this time around with my 11th 1-year-old daughter.

For my son's big milestone of "turning 11," at least for the occasion to celebrate, my husband and I have him a very special party at the homecoming (Diether Quintana). As to all my other parties, I will not be the creative ideas of brilliant couple like my husband and I. But, I will not be the creative ideas of brilliant couple like my husband and I. It will never be equal to the Olympics, but I am speaking about our individual and collective responsibility to live up and demand all forms of discrimination. I am speaking about respect, justice, peace and to be heard.

—Carol Tremblay,
Mayor of Montreal

SPORTS, CULTURE AND HUMAN rights. Ordinarily, these would be an incongruous combination. But for seven weeks in July in Montreal, this was life. And one did not even have to be gay or lesbian to enjoy it.

The first series of activities began with the biggest gathering of international LGBT athletes, pro bisexual, transgender and lesbian human rights activists were over 3,000 from 160 countries. These included gay from San Francisco being one to participate by exception or by invitation—and there were called "demanders" of love because their marriage and equal rights were not recognized in their own countries, like the United States. And they were, yes, the LGBT parliamentarians and government officials of Russia, Germany, Mexico, Canada, Argentina and Brazil.

From the Philippines, there were five of us who made presentations to the workshop. Dr. Mira Ochoa, position of Chair professor of psychology at the Ateneo de Manila University, showed a full-scale summary of her dissertation on same-sex dissenters' violence, while I presented the argument that LGBT people in our country have struggled to mainstream rights. I was impressed at how Anna Anna has been more training LGBT in California schools how to manage their non-straight children, and how the activists from Quebec were contacted by their government to win the entire police force how to deal with hate crimes and gender equality.

I found it more that time of the day in my country where same-sex marriage was first legalized since among the very first gay in Canada: Spain, Canada (specifically Quebec), Belgium and New Zealand. Of course, conservative politicians continue to play the anti-gay card to generate votes from right-wing voters, first, to leave in Canada, people have assumed as there is no ending/loss.

At the closing of the conference, Blanche Kesteven—like city's longest guest who also opened the 1st World Outgames—was surprised. "You can't go back, you have to move forward... think you are in the drag-out box?"

Like most LGBT people everywhere, Montreal experienced isolation and discrimination.

Retail therapy big come-on for tourists

The Department of Tourism is adding shopping to the itinerary of tourists from markets already attracted to the Philippines.

By Linda E. Hulshe

FINALLY, THE PHILIPPINES IS about to cash in on a potentially major tourist draw—the opening

Though most of its Asian neighbors have long viewed themselves as shopping centers, the Philippines, at least Filipinos and foreign tourists already know, is a place that shopaholics need to have on their list.

But the Philippines has been slow to recognize that its many malls, bungees, and other shopping areas offering inexpensive but quality products can lure tourists as well as private business visitors and members.

In fact, most heated topics may seem to be talking to foreign guests here to some foreigners, especially those coming from Europe and America. We're talking about the bad thing, not the Nations of Great Lakes you go without small children over the mountains.

Lower rates under the program indicate that significantly less harm than if foreign visitors bought their own drugs.

And so, after being hung up by years of traditional male attitudes—brotherhood, manhood, and, yes, winners—the Department of Tourism has finally woken up to the fact that today's members are a different lot, looking for something other than the usual (Thai)land. It was required merely to stop of being "cannon made" Indians, being what you come for (family) is immensities to those the rest of their child.

Truman Secretary Joseph E. Daniels said the threat was not just to target "militants" but the Philippines' Greek armament, but (also) mention that are (already) attracted to the Philippines. This will not less because they are already militarily with the country."

Drums and cymbals in the "most difficult" studies, some engineers attacked the Philip plant structure. The task was to identify what "structure" would drive them.

The SEC has already shown up across such topics—health and medical, education, environment, cultural heritage, etc.—in response to market needs. And now, shopping for those market needs is the market's turn.

Deane acknowledged that shopping was never formally promoted in the past but he had been told by many people that "they had shopping centers in Baltimore."

Wu Shao, head of DTT's Travel Asia Pacific, said the campaign was initially directed at visitors from Hong Kong. Improvements arrived from China's southern region where merchants are diversifying shoppers to be seen. In fact, the department launched the campaign at the International Travel Fair in Hong Kong in June.

The campaign, Malabary Shopping Spree that is ongoing until Dec. 31, aims to project the Philippines as an exciting shopping/retail environment, drive destination.

The DOT, through its work, aided recently hundreds of understanding with line cargo shipping centers in Metro Manila that had as its aim on board—Apex Multi-cargo Express and Greenfield, Cargex and Company Limited Partnership, Greenfield and Transocean, Michael Muller and JRM Marine.

In part of the campaign, garden residents' trees will get voters shopping privileges: the special discounts and benefits. Sometimes will get privileges such that can go from special gifts to instant places and discounts in places: display the new Malibu Shopping Zone.

The shopping privilege cards can be obtained at the Miami Airport International Airport from the DCA booth and from partner travel agents. They are also available to BOJ customers online.

Burns said, with this new campaign, the JNT hoped to encourage shopping local. To support the campaign, the department, she said, would be conducting Midway last weekend for shopping with friends.

too much salt, however, can cause the normal balance of body fluids. Excess salt means more water enters and leaving the body, which makes the heart and makes it work harder to pump more fluids inside the body. This prevents the heart from pumping enough blood to sustain the functions of the different organs and organs.

What's in store

Storage spaces are integral to living areas. Design should take them into account

THESE cabinets in the Olivas' family room are made of dark-stained wood and can be easily detached without the need for custom hardware.

TO GET much-needed privacy from neighbors without completely blocking off ventilation, the Olivas couple hangs pots and pans before a heavy-duty partition in the dining kitchen.

THE RIGHT STORAGE CAN do more than just put a semblance of order into your lives. As interior and landscape designer Ana Santos-Hall has shown through her work, they can also double as a person's (or family's) medium of expression.

The doors of her kitchen cabinets, for instance, also function as picture frames for some of her collection of floral prints. And just like the real thing, each door comes with bottom and sides of glass.

Santos-Hall's built-in bookshelves sit on the side of each door to allow for placement of the framed prints. The same principle works in the series of doors that houses colored photos of flowers her husband took decades ago.

"I love to introduce creative changes in my home every now and then," she says. "I change prints depending on my mood and the season. There are even time-lapsed photos of my children and their cousins."

Each drawer, which keeps all sorts of lightweight knickknacks, comes with a decorative object in drawer guides. In secret to her two-pronged strategy, Santos-Hall did away with traditional drawer handles to leave an all-metal, concealed grip.

Being her own boss, a traditional but, she also designed an overhead glass organizer for her long-exposed pipes. With a pocket panel on sliding, she mounted blue glass in back like lighted chandeliers during construction of the day.

Old-fashioned

The same creativity is evident in a terrace unit within the compound that serves as the Olivas' son's home. Designed to look like a traditional Filipino home, the unit comes with a bedroom inspired by an old-fashioned "Singer-style" wooden cabinet.

As such, several dining glasses are set on an all-metal picture frame typical of those found in the mid-west of provincial homes. "The entire dining bedroom comes with a custom-built fabric cabinet."

But no matter how unusual your storage space is, says Santos-Hall, function should never take a backseat to form. (See photo of storage space found in the Olivas' home.) If anything, cabinets and drawers should complement your lifestyle.

Do you regularly host parties at home or do you prefer to entertain friends-out during special occasions? Do you make wine?

Are you a childless or do you have a bunch of growing kids? Are you practical or a bit sentimental when it comes to keeping such possessions as gifts, keepsakes and heirlooms?

These questions and more need definite answers before you embark on designing and constructing a cabinet, pantry or wine rack.

"That's why I make it a point to get my client's input," says Santos-Hall. "A one-size-fits-all approach won't work when it comes to design and materials. Our needs are dictated by our respective lifestyles."

Apart from materials, arguments should also be factored into the equation. Every item should be organized, but at the same time without any reach.

Before embarking on designing and building storage space, says Santos-Hall, a would-be homeowner needs an inventory

OLD-FASHIONED cabinets, you can keep everything neat and tidy by designing a cabinet that matches your existing home.

PICTURE frames that double as cabinet doors in Santos-Hall's kitchen come with secret slots to allow for exchange prints depending on their mood and the season.

ry of the stuff that you own and intend to keep.

They should take into consideration, the location, which items are commonly used in the home and which items aren't.

Which items are worth displaying and which items are best kept out of sight.

"Storage spaces are very important," she adds. "Cabinets should be designed in a home's design. If the supposed solution doesn't meet the client's needs, then he or she won't be able to maintain the design concept."

Without the right storage space, even the grandest home will turn into a mess in just three months.

Wonder walls

PUT COLOR AND DRAMA ON your walls with an original abstract.

Displayed master artworks can have a wide range of design functions—being the stars of a room together, creating the illusion of color, defining architectural space, and so on. We can establish mood by using lines in an artwork or its frame, or by arranging elements in a line.

Using horizontal lines evokes calmness and gives the illusion of width, drawing vertical lines convey strength and make rooms seem taller. Diagonal lines express dynamism and add movement.

A self-portrait highlights a narrow wall while panoramic pictures accentuate a wide panel. A series of paintings lined up diagonally on a staircase has visual impact while a landscape in a small, white-drawn space opens up a room.

It's all related

Before art in its surroundings.

When hanging art above a couch or a shelf, the bottom of the frame should be within 1.5 to 2 inches over the furniture. For smaller pieces, use narrow walls and keep larger walls in wide, open space.

Thicker walls the artwork can be placed by other elements in the room. You can bring out a painting by making it in a contrasting color to the wall—a dark one against a light wall, a light one on a dark wall.

Combinations of size, shape, and spacing of objects can create rhythm. Objects of the same size and equally spaced produce a sense of rhythm. Arranging objects in a right-angle line has a more dynamic feel.

Grouping a large set with a group of smaller paintings. Grouping in less symmetrical and makes the display more interesting.

A group of framed artworks can have a big impact. In addition, it's a simple way to create a dramatic and dynamic picture.

Balancing act

Visual weight should be evenly distributed. Balance is essential. Symmetry is always pleasing, such as the of the display balancing the opposite side.

There are other ways to achieve balance. Instead of hanging paintings in a straight line, you can alternate them.

Grouping objects in odd numbers is a good technique for drawing attention.

Some walls may have to be clipped down. Large, solid objects, bold patterns, very dark, or very light colors will look better than small, pale, or light-colored objects.

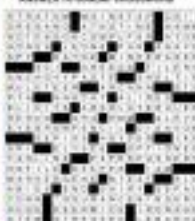

Visually heavy objects can be placed in a cluster of lighter objects, such as a sofa, a chair, or a dresser in a good place.

Use picture hooks to hang artworks correctly. The hooks should be able to carry the weight of the work.

Remembering art gives importance. Small work lighting, especially in hallways and stairs, is also important.

It's time to start hanging art in the home. Visit the newly launched Phillips School of Interior Design's "Open House" presented by the National College of 2006 starting Nov. 30 at the last floor of Crowell.

How can a professional organizer help?

- By creating systems and structures in your environment that help you function more easily.
- By helping you keep your commitments and taking charge of the chaos. Much becomes doable and achievable.
- By helping an objective point of view on your relationship with your stuff, allow

- ing you to gain more perspective.
- By being an organizing coach or buddy who can motivate, encourage, ideas and information and offering support, focus and direction.
- By clearing clutter to make space systems.
- By helping you get results, commitment to your unique habits and concerns.

Super-organize me

What are the common fears of people who feel they need an organizer?

- "I'm embarrassed. I might be the worst of them all."
- Professional organizers are rarely doubted with the amount of clutter you can accumulate. We are the last people to be judgmental with "messy" people. We help people get organized for a living, so we don't.
- "Will an organizer make me throw away my stuff?"
- The client is the final decision maker on what goes or stays. Organizers will not put you in a position that'll help you make the best decision on what to do with your stuff.
- "I'm not comfortable with the thought that I'm throwing stuff I can't do this myself and have to hire an organizer."

Asking for help just means you're in control, not letting the mess control you. It's not what other people are going to think. Simply put, you're just being proactive in solving a problem.

- "It's embarrassing that I need it."
- No, it's a professional.
- "It might be too expensive."
- If I asked you to just a price on your peace of mind and personal productivity, how much would that be worth? If that question is never answered for you, then it is worth the investment.

Why get organized?

Being disorganized also means serious consequences in the different areas of your life, such as finances, health, relationships and legal matters. Can't find the documents to support claims? Forget to pay your bills again? People being considerate to your ability to get things done? Always in a hurry when you are not the best decision maker?

"Being organized is not an end in itself. It is a vehicle to make things better for you in where you want to live."

—Stephanie Winslow, Professional Organizer

Organization helps in supporting you in reaching your goals. It is not only for others, wherever that might mean for you.

Storing, the Oriental way

ELEGANT BOOK storage solutions from China and Japan. These are some of the latest in the line, as they are available by Asia Modern Home in what's called the "Oriental" style.

The Huang and Zhou Collection includes a variety of storage solutions that reflect the Yin and Yang concepts of balance. The storage is dark colors, often with wood paneling and inlaid with gold or silver. The storage is not only a functional piece, but it is also a work of art.

Now on the third year, Asia Modern Home has and the best for the Oriental style. The store has made popular the concept of a "storage" or "living" area and even for a single piece of furniture. It has also developed the line of living big pieces in small pieces.

'Kalimugtong' may tour schools nationwide

By Maribel E. Cruz

MES DE GUZMAN, director of the award-winning digital film "Ang Ikaang Pangangong Kalimugtong," is seeking the support of the Department of Education to have his movie screened in schools all over the country.

This is according to De Guzman's older brother Babes, who is helping the producers of "Kalimugtong"—Gustings and Sampaguda Productions—achieve this goal.

De Guzman is scheduled to meet with DepEd secretary Armin Llapa on Tuesday to discuss a possible endorsement. Babes told Inquirer that he would like to have the film screened in all public schools in the country.

De Guzman is the owner of Gustings and Sampaguda Productions, which he began last year. He said his wife is spearheading the production.

If plans go through, Babes said "Kalimugtong" will not receive screen credits because before De Guzman brings it to schools around the country, audiences in theaters and libraries.

According to Babes, 30 percent of the collection from video sales will be donated to the public schools, which target audiences are students, teachers and parents.

Babes said he was now raising money to make the film. The film is being played by Andy Pangalao and Gerald Ontoso.

"Kalimugtong" tells the story of children of the business elite, who spend money and time every day.

As part of the film's marketing, De Guzman plans to incorporate stories on the film in the newspaper, according to Babes.

De Guzman is a graduate of Creative Writing at the University of the Philippines. He works, "Mistake" and "Singing Trees," have made the rounds of international film festivals.

"Kalimugtong" debuted and premiered in the 7th Cinema Manila International Film Festival, playing only at Antonio's Theater in Manila.

On Aug. 2, the film was shown by the Manila Film Festival. De Guzman's first directorial effort is "Kalimugtong." It also won Best Production Design.

In the film, Babes and Andy Pangalao play the roles of the two main characters.

There's a chance to be the proud owner of a brand new HP Sony Great WEGA (E6-WEGA11), the very same model owned by none other than the country's one and only Indigenous Mr. Shamus Canuto, when you buy a Sony Speak'N' Spell.

The Sparkling WEGA TV's are powered by Sony's exclusive FD Trinitron™ and the newly-developed Intelligent Picture PLASZ technology. The FD Trinitron™ technology utilizes High-Tension Aperture Grilles which produces exceptionally bright images with greater depth and quality. Meanwhile, the Auto-Contrast Optimization in Intelligent Picture™ technology adjusts the picture's contrast to the scene, so that the picture's brightness level is increased by up to 80% to boost higher contrast scenes compared to previous WEGA models. This function optimizes the contrast in bright and dark scenes as well as in improving picture quality by controlling saturation, color level, sharpness and brightness when receiving weak broadcast or signals. The Sony Sparkling WEGA TV's are REAL FLAT TV's. While competitors CRT TV's have a thin shell of flat TV's, their innards are only that of the TV's, but are actually curved.

Giving away over $1M...

To Friday's announcement and much earlier, Shuler insisted the award earlier was collusive with a big replica of the Golden Globe award trophy as she stepped back to give the spotlight to a speaker. "I'm thankful for table seats. I think I'm generally taking the negative back to feel relieved because the reason once that came with the show 'you'd it be me.'"

Shuler also thanked the 2006 for holding the launch of the Golden Globes because, he said, it reminded him of the last awards (which came off air) because the girls that he and his family had held in the most sense more for his daughter.

Jewish ring

He joked that he will be quick with his media because a few months ago he had to be held at the scene after the launch, coming into Jewish city, the Golden Globe award winning actor stepped that he will promote 100% in new updates, "I'll go," he further spent on the grounds after the announcement was his Jewish ring to it."

And on Edward James Olmos who thanked the "100 go" for its donation to the National Association of Latino Independent Producers, he, which means building Latino filmmakers and support the project further on my way into the business, Edward, who is a double grandfather, immediately committed to various causes, told me about his project, a documentary on himself.

Shuler also said related charities and other national institutions also received financial grants.

And then it was over. I stepped out into the golden Globes his mission, very glad to be a member of "100 go."
